

Evidence Checklist

Start with what you have. You do not need a complete file before requesting a free consultation.

1. Save the communications

- ☐ Original voicemails or audio already in your possession, with dates and caller details.
- ☐ Complete text threads, including sender, timestamps, STOP replies, and confirmations.
- ☐ Call-log screenshots or carrier records. Use the call log to organize each contact.

2. Identify the caller and message

- ☐ Company, seller, or agent names; displayed numbers; and any callback numbers.
- ☐ What was sold or discussed, whose name was requested, and whether the voice sounded recorded. Mark anything you are unsure about.

3. Record your history

- ☐ Do Not Call registration confirmation and date, if registered.
- ☐ Any signup, quote request, purchase, or consent language involving the company.
- ☐ Your stop or wrong-number request: date, wording, method, response, and later contacts.
- ☐ When you obtained your phone number, especially if calls are for someone else.

4. Prepare copies for review

- ☐ Keep unaltered originals privately. Remove unrelated sensitive details from copies you send, including account numbers and Social Security numbers.
- ☐ Use clear filenames and match them to log entries. Mark remembered dates or counts as estimates.

Preserve evidence without inviting more contact.

You do not need to keep answering calls or open suspicious links. Before recording a live conversation, ask an attorney about the recording laws that apply.

Ready for a review? Describe the company, dates, and what happened at FightRoboCalls.com/case-review. Attachments are optional: up to 5 files, 5 MB each. A completed PDF or Excel call log can be included.

Notes or questions for your consultation
